

LINDSEY BUCKINGHAM ON BRIAN WILSON

"His music always had the quality of lifting the spirit in a way that transcended his subject matter. Brian decided his music was about his own growth rather than just about selling records. Having been part of a machine that was often dedicated to cranking out hits, I appreciate what it took for him to make that choice."

Lindsey Buckingham (right) with Brian Wilson.

PHOTOGRAPH BY AARON RAPOPORT

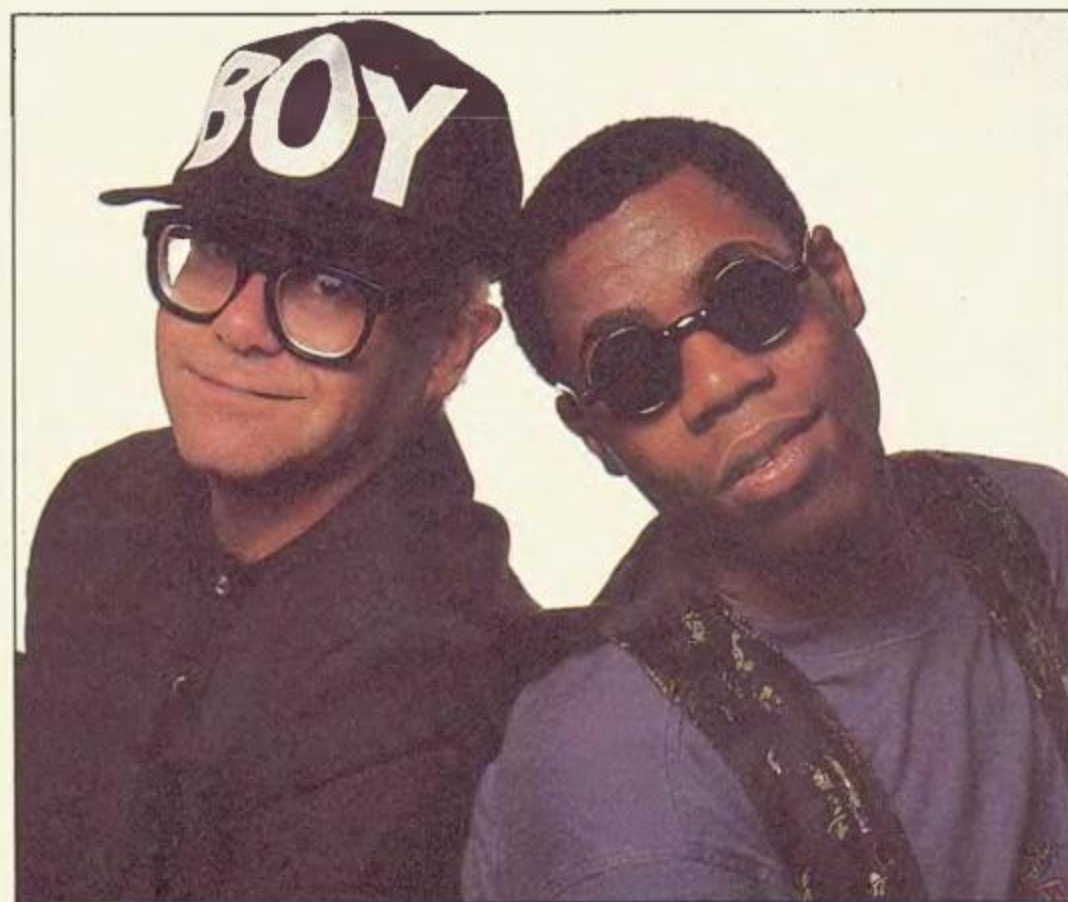

BRUCE HORNSBY ON LEON RUSSELL

"Listening to Leon play was inspiration for me to start playing piano. The first time I saw him live, it just tore me up. He put on the greatest rock & roll show I ever saw. He was a very controlled performer but very intense. My love for Leon's music goes back a long time, but it's still happening now."

Bruce Hornsby (right) with Leon Russell.

PHOTOGRAPH BY GLENN HALL

ROACHFORD ON ELTON JOHN

"Those Seventies singles Elton pumped out one after the other were classics — really brilliant pop records that somehow never seem to quite get the respect they deserve. He's a great songwriter, an extraordinary keyboard player and an incredible singer. And he's an extremely soulful guy — people forget that sometimes."

Roachford (right) with Elton John.

PHOTOGRAPH BY JOHN SWANNELL

TOM PETTY ON ROGER MCGUINN

"We were awestruck when we met Roger. I was in L.A., and somebody told me that Roger wanted to see me. I came in, and he said, 'Pick up that guitar and play.' Scared the shit out of me. Then he said, 'I really did think it was me when I heard 'American Girl.'"

Tom Petty (left) with Roger McGuinn.

PHOTOGRAPH BY AARON RAPOPORT