

TOM Petty (second from right) and the Heartbreakers, with members of Pearl Jam in a concert on June 27.

Tom Petty opens closet

CLEVELAND—IT'S NOT OFTEN A rock star opens up his bedroom closet to the world. Tom Petty did and the results are on display at the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum, which is showcasing Petty and the Heartbreakers in an exhibit that opened Friday.

When representatives from the Rock Hall visited Petty's Spanish-style ranch in Malibu, California, in April looking for artifacts, he invited them into his bedroom, then into his rather sizable closet.

Petty pulled out a flowered shirt he wore in the video for his biggest chart hit, "Free Fallin'," and the gray jacket he wore as a member of the esteemed Traveling Wilburys. He also produced a nylon bag of notebooks filled with handwritten lyrics.

"We left his house pinching ourselves," said curator Howard Kramer.

The exhibit includes a montage of the band's videos, including the psychedelic, "Alice in Wonderland"-inspired "Don't Come Around Here No More." Petty's oversized hat from his "The Mad Hatter" role is a permanent part of the museum's collection. AP

SPIN CITY

New, improved Freestyle

FREESTYLE is back with new members, a new sound and a new album.

The album is titled "Freestyle

freestyle

LIVE @ 19 East

Live @ 19 East," the band's first with new vocalists Joshua Desiderio and Mike Luis and new bassist Rommel de la Cruz (Barbie's Cradle) who replaced Carlo Tapia, who has migrated to Australia.

Still with the band are Tat Suzara, Nikki Cabardo, Gerard Banzon and female vocalist Jinky Vidal.

On July 14, the band will sign autographs at Tower Records Makati